A. OVERVIEW OF THE LAW REFORM COMMISSION

The Law Reform Commission of Nova Scotia was created by the Government of Nova Scotia under the Law Reform Commission Act.¹ The Commission consists of between five and seven Commissioners (there are currently six), an Executive Director and legal research and administrative staff. The Commission reports to the public and the elected representatives of Nova Scotia through the Attorney General of Nova Scotia. It is not, however, a government department, but an independent advisor to government. The Commissioners, whose appointment process is set out in the Act, currently serve part-time and come from different sectors of the community. One Commissioner is a judge appointed by the Governor in Council (provincial Cabinet) after consultation with the Chief Justice of Nova Scotia and the chief judge of the court of which the judge is a member; two are community representatives appointed by Cabinet; two are appointed by the Council of the Nova Scotia Barristers' Society; and one person represents the full-time members of the Faculty of Law, Dalhousie University. One of the Commissioners must not be a graduate in law.

Mandate

The Commission's job is to review Nova Scotia law and to make recommendations for its improvement, modernization and reform. This may involve formulating new ideas and approaches to law, or proposing ways in which existing laws and the legal system can be made clearer or simpler to better serve the needs of the province. The Commission may choose a topic for law reform based upon suggestions received from government, lawyers, judges, or the community. A project may also follow a government request, generally known as a reference. Since 1991, the Commission has received four references from the Government. The references related respectively to the administrative justice system, the probate system, mental health provisions of the Hospitals Act, and adoption information law.²

The Commission does not make law in Nova Scotia; that task is performed in part by the elected Members of the House of Assembly. The Commission's reports and recommendations are, however, formally presented to the Attorney General and may result in changes to the law. Law is also made through the decisions of judges and appointed administrative decision-makers in cases that come before them.

² Reports on the administrative justice, probate, and Hospitals Act projects have been completed. Following completion of background research, work on adoption information law was suspended after news in 2000 of the loss of government funding. The project was subsequently referred to a committee formed by the Minister of Community Services.

A distinguishing characteristic of the Commission is its independence from government. Although in the past the Commission received a significant portion of funding from government, on average about one third of its money came from other sources. Government has a role in Commissioner selection, but does not choose all of the Commissioners, and no Commissioner is chosen to represent the Government. The Commission does undertake government requests for law reform projects, as far as is feasible, but apart from that requirement, is free to select the work it undertakes. So long as done in compliance with its object and powers under the Act, the Commission enjoys a free hand in terms of its activities: it may conduct meetings, hire people, perform research, publish reports, enter into cooperative arrangements with other entities, and decide how its funds are to be spent.

Law Reform Process

The Commission usually prepares two publications during the course of a project. The first publication, the Discussion Paper, sets out the Commission's preliminary suggestions for reform. The purpose of the Discussion Paper is to encourage people to consider and comment on the Commission's preliminary suggestions, as well as any issues, principles, and assumptions identified as having influenced the Commission's proposals for reform.

As part of the preparations for a Discussion Paper, the Commission generally forms an Advisory Group. The Advisory Group usually consists of Commission legal staff, and a number of community members, including government representatives, the judiciary, lawyers and other professionals, as well as participants from groups with interest or expertise in the topic being studied. The Group meets to identify and discuss relevant issues, as well as to propose to the Commission what should be included in a Discussion Paper.

The second publication is a Final Report, which is submitted to the Attorney General, and which is widely distributed. It contains the final recommendations of the Commission and, in some cases, a draft law. The Commission makes its final recommendations after it takes into account the responses it receives to the Discussion Paper. A Final Report is intended to provide a basis for the Government to consider and adopt the recommended reforms. The process adopted by the Commission, of seeking expert advice, consulting widely, synthesizing feedback, deliberating and report writing, is a time-consuming one. It is a process, however, which is designed to give greater weight and credibility to the final recommendations which result. The Commission does not engage in active advocacy regarding implementation of its recommendations beyond providing the recommendations to the Government and members of the public. The Commission has produced 34 project reports and 13 annual reports, which are listed at Appendix C. [All reports can be downloaded without cost from the Commission's website.]

Effects of Law Reform Work

Recommendations in Commission Final Reports have been brought into effect in a number of ways.

Most recently, the Nova Scotia Government amended the province's Mechanics' Lien Act, thereby implementing most of the recommendations in the Commission's June 2003 Final Report on builders' liens. The influence of the Commission's work, however, goes beyond legislation. Certain Final Report recommendations have been implemented through government policies or protocols. Commission reports have also served an important educational function and have been used as course materials in high schools and at post-secondary institutions. Government, public interest groups, and other organizations have relied on Commission reports in order to develop awareness of issues and to focus discussions among interested people. For instance, Law Reform Agencies, a 2004 publication of the International Cooperation Group of the Federal Department of Justice, reflected the influence of Commission reports.

The contents of Commission reports have been referred to by a number of courts, including the Supreme Court of Canada, as part of their published case decisions. Judges have mentioned Commission reports in the context of interim payment of damages, matrimonial property, administrative law, the jury system, powers of attorney and the legal status of the child born outside of marriage.

Nova Scotia House of Assembly members from the Liberal, New Democratic, and Progressive Conservative parties have referred with approval to Commission reports or to Commission work generally, during the course of legislative debates.

Most of the Commission's time is spent choosing, discussing, and researching law reform subjects, followed by report writing and communicating the conclusions reached. Another significant role of Commission staff is responding to inquiries about the law or about aspects of the Commission's work. The Commission does not provide legal advice, nor does it intervene in individual cases. Nonetheless, Commission staff continue to respond to inquiries by telephone, by fax, by letter, by e-mail, or in person. In replying to inquiries, Commission staff have provided legal information, copies of Commission reports as well as other documents, and contact details for government departments and other relevant institutions.

Funding

The Commission is currently funded jointly (50% each) by the Nova Scotia Department of Justice and the Law Foundation of Nova Scotia. The Law Foundation, which funds work relating to the law, legal education, and the administration of justice, obtains its funds from the interest on lawyers' general trust accounts. The Law Foundation's objects specifically include law reform.³

B. THE YEAR IN REVIEW 2004-2005

Work Program and Publications:

1. The Rules Revision Project

The fiscal year just ended (March 31, 2005) was unique in that for the first time the focus of the Law Reform Commission's work was not on examining the laws of the province with a view to recommending changes, but rather on revision of the Civil Procedure Rules that guide the workings of Nova Scotia courts.

The Civil Procedure Rules have not been reviewed in depth for over thirty years, and while they have served the province and its people well, it was deemed appropriate to re-examine them, change them if necessary, add to them where appropriate and discontinue aspects no longer relevant. The Supreme Court invited the Law Reform Commission to be a part of this process.

Review of the Rules began in earnest early in 2004 when a Steering Committee comprised of members of the Bench, Bar and the Department of Justice was struck. The Law Reform Commission would provide administrative and research support to the Steering Committee as well as to eight working groups, mandated to examine various aspects of the individual Rules and, as appropriate, make recommendations for their revision.

It was anticipated that supporting this important undertaking would be the Commission's principal occupation in the fiscal year ending March, 2005 - and it was, largely to the exclusion of discussion papers and final reports which would normally have been produced.

Every meeting of every working group and of the Steering Committee was attended by one or more representatives from the Law Reform Commission of Nova Scotia. Every group called upon the Commission for research materials, and the Commission independently sought materials it considered useful. To initiate the public consultation process, the Law Reform Commission published an Issues Memorandum in June 2004. To ensure input from the Nova Scotia Bar, a series of meetings with Bar members was scheduled throughout the province in the fall of 2004. The public was canvassed through a series of newspaper ads which drew submissions from interested citizens of varied backgrounds and interests, and an interactive website was developed to further invite participation by all Nova Scotians.

The Rules Revision Project progressed well throughout 2004, with all working groups meeting regularly and finally submitting the bulk of their recommendations to the Steering Committee by the end of March 2005.

Although the Rules Project was, for the most part, all consuming, the Commission completed its work on two papers previously begun:

2. Privity of Contract: (Third Party Rights): Final Report issued August 2004

The concept of privity provides that only a party to a contract may sue or be sued under it. The concept has two parts. First, only a party to a contract may enforce its terms. Second, a contract cannot impose obligations on a person who is not a party to the contract. The first part of the concept can lead to inconvenience or hardship with respect to those contracts, sometimes known as third party beneficiary agreements, which seek to provide a benefit to a person who is not a party to the contract. A benefit could involve the receipt of something, such as a payment of money, or it could mean a right to avoid or lessen the effect of something, such as a limitation on liability.

The range of possible third party beneficiary agreements is quite wide. They could be especially relevant in the context of family gifts, small business transactions, banking arrangements, and employment situations. Regardless of the benefit involved, the third party meant to benefit can obtain no rights under such a contract and will therefore not be able to enforce it.

The major recommendation of the Commission's Final Report was that the privity of contract concept should be relaxed by statute, to allow third party beneficiaries to enforce their rights under a contract. The Report's other recommendations included: under the proposed statute, a third party beneficiary would be identified in a contract by name, description, or reference to a class; the proposed statute would allow for third party beneficiaries who are not known or in existence at the time a contract is made; the proposed statute would make no distinction between express and implied third party benefits; and a third party beneficiary should not be able to enforce a benefit where the contract's language makes it clear that the parties did not intend their agreement to be enforceable by a third party.

3. Court-ordered structured settlements-Personal Injury Damage Awards

Preliminary work on this project began in the latter part of 2002. Initially the project concerned itself with the issue of whether or not the courts in Nova Scotia should have jurisdiction in certain circumstances to order the imposition of a structured settlement when awarding damages in personal injury cases.

Shortly before the anticipated publication of a Commission Discussion Paper on this subject, the Government introduced and passed legislation amending the Judicature Act which, amongst other things, provides the courts with the jurisdiction to order structured settlements in personal injury cases. As a result, the original purpose of this project became effectively moot.

The Commission had, however, gathered some potentially useful information with respect to structured settlements and those circumstances in which the courts may find their use to be appropriate. The Commission decided therefore to re-draft the Discussion Paper with a view to making available a background paper for the information of those most interested in the use of structured settlements, namely judges, lawyers and recipients of personal injury damage awards. The background paper was released in August of 2004.

Work in Progress

- < Rules Revision Project
The Civil Procedure Rules Revision Project continues to be the pre-occupation of the Commission. During the upcoming summer months, the Commission will be engaged in carrying out a number of research assignments in support of the drafting stage of this project, which will commence in September 2005. The drafting process will be spearheaded by a Supreme Court justice, assisted by a senior solicitor on secondment from the Department of Justice. The Commission anticipates being fully engaged in supporting the work of the Steering Committee throughout the fall and winter months as well as the work of two drafting sub-committees. In addition, it is expected there will be several task forces struck to address outstanding issues.

- < Other Projects
The Commission expects to undertake one or more discrete projects in addition to its work with respect to the Rules Revision Project. Although there were a number of projects under active discussion at the end of the reporting period, no decisions had yet been taken with respect to the Commission's next project.

Partnership: Saint Mary's University

In July 2003, the Law Reform Commission of Nova Scotia and Saint Mary's University signed a formal Memorandum of Understanding setting out the cooperative arrangements and terms of a partnership. Both the University and the Commission believe that Saint Mary's affiliation with the Canadian Centre for Ethics and Public Affairs, the Atlantic Metropolis Centre⁴, as well as various University departments and schools, provide a number of potential opportunities for the pursuit of activities and projects of mutual interest. Though the Rules Project work has precluded the Commission's taking on new projects in the fiscal year just ended, such collaborative activities with Saint Mary's have been, and continue to be a matter of active discussions. In furtherance of our partnership with Saint Mary's, a meeting between Commissioners and senior administrators and faculty of Saint Mary's University has been scheduled for early in the next fiscal year. There is optimism that a mutually suitable project will be found in the coming year.

External Activities and Relations

The Commission and its staff consider it particularly important to maintain close liaison with the practicing bar, the judiciary, the legal academic community, the Government and others. The liaison with the Nova Scotia Bar was strengthened in the fall of 2004 when, as one component of the Rules Revision Project, and in concert with the Bench, consultative meetings were arranged throughout the province. This provided an excellent opportunity to meet with representatives from the Bar; to explore their concerns with changes to the Civil Procedure Rules with which they work, and to invite input to the revision process.

Commission staff have attended and participated in a number of external meetings and conferences during the past year in addition to many less formal activities. In particular the Commission's Executive Director participated in the Annual Meetings of:

- < the Nova Scotia Barristers' Society
- < the Federation of Law Reform Agencies of Canada
- < the Uniform Law Conference of Canada
- < the Association of Canadian Court Administrators

In addition the Executive Director attended various meetings and events hosted by such organizations as the Legal Information Society of Nova Scotia, the Canadian Bar Association - Nova Scotia Branch, the Nova Scotia Barristers' Society and the Law Commission of Canada.

The Commission has also continued to maintain and strengthen its relations with sister law reform bodies and other participants in the justice system. The Executive Director is the current President of the Federation of Law Reform Agencies of Canada and in that capacity made a presentation to the Canadian Bar Association's Board Meeting in August 2004.

The Commission's Legal Research Counsel attended a government-sponsored conference on mental health legislation in Canada, in February 2005, and he continues to receive inquiries relating to the Commission's 2002 report, Mental Health Provisions of the Hospitals Act.

During the reporting period Commission work was mentioned in such news media as the Cape Breton Post, the Chronicle Herald, the Daily News (Halifax), and the Lawyers' Weekly. Commission reports were also mentioned in Canadian Bar Association and Nova Scotia Barristers' Society publications, other law reform agencies' reports and Nova Scotia Government publications and appeared on websites such as the Canadian Paralegic Association (NS) and the CBC. During this reporting period, the Commission's reports were referred to on several occasions in the Nova Scotia House of Assembly.

The Commission's website continues to maintain an open invitation to the public for project suggestions and new ideas for law reform. As well, the Nova Scotia Courts website links to that of the Law Reform Commission for interaction concerning the Rules Revision Project.

Internal Administration and Organization

The Commission currently has six Commissioners. A seventh position is vacant.

In the past year the Commissioners met on four occasions.

John E.S. Briggs continued to serve as Executive Director and General Counsel and William Laurence as Legal Research Counsel. The Commission's Administrative Assistant is Mary Bowen.

The Commission was fortunate this year to arrange for the part time services of William H. Charles, Q.C. as a special advisor to the Commission with particular responsibilities with respect to the Rules Project.

Funding & Finances

From 2001 the Commission had been wholly funded by the Law Foundation of Nova Scotia by virtue of a three-year grant of core funding in the amount of $250,000 per annum (granted April 2001). The Commission is most appreciative of the Law Foundation's support, without which it could not have continued to operate.

At the close of the 2003 fiscal year, the Government of Nova Scotia agreed to provide 50% funding for the years 2004-05 and 2005-06 ($250,000 in total) as well as $5,000 supplementary funding to support the Rules Project in 2004-05. The Commission subsequently received an additional $20,000 of supplementary Government funding in support of the Rules Revision Project for fiscal year 2005-06. In February of 2005, the Law Foundation granted the Commission 50% of the 2005-06 funding ($125,000). The Commission is again grateful for this support.

It should be noted, however, that (except for the supplementary amounts to support the Rules Project), the Commission's budget has remained static for the past five years at the level of $250,000 per annum. The Commission has carefully managed its funds with the result that it has been able to maintain a reserve fund which at year end stood at approximately $14,000.

The Commission's financial statement for the year ending 31 March 2005 is attached to this report as Appendix B. The Commission posted a deficit in the current year of some $19,000 due in part to the need to address the issue of staff remuneration. The Commission's reserve fund was reduced by an equal amount and, as noted above, at year end stood at $14,116.68.

Although it was anticipated that the reserve fund might have been used in its entirety in 2004-05, the influx of some supplementary funds ($5,000) as well as careful management has meant that there continues to be a small reserve. As indicated, long standing staff remuneration issues were addressed in part in 2004-05. While the Commission expects to operate within its available resources in the upcoming fiscal year, funding beyond 2005-2006 has not yet been confirmed. Clearly this issue will need to be addressed early in the upcoming year.

C. THE YEAR AHEAD

The Commission will continue to support the Rules Revision Project in 2005-2006, but will also turn its attention to a resumption of its work reviewing the laws of Nova Scotia and making recommendations for their improvement. The Commissioners will meet early in the new fiscal year to consider project topics. Also early in the new year, meetings are scheduled with our partners, Saint Mary's University and with our sister law reform agencies at a Federation of Law Reform Agencies workshop.

Not for the first time, the funding of the Commission is a concern. In looking ahead, however, we are encouraged by the strong expressions of support shown in the fiscal year just ended by those who have funded us - support which we can only believe is due to the recognized quality of the Commission's work. We are particularly grateful for the support which we have received from the Attorney General, Michael Baker, Q.C. and his deputy, Doug Keefe, Q.C., the current and past Chief Justices of Nova Scotia, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, the Presidents of the Nova Scotia Barristers' Society and CBA, Nova Scotia Branch, the Dean of the Dalhousie Law School and many others who so willingly served on our Advisory Groups or otherwise supported the Commission and its work. We are confident that our work this past year has spoken well of our abilities and are optimistic that this will translate into continued financial support.

In summary, the 2004-2005 fiscal year was a positive one in which the Commission embarked on a new and interesting challenge as part of the Civil Procedure Rules Revision Project. This Project has allowed the Commission to work closely with the Bench and Bar, and to experience a broadening of our horizons - all of which was, of course, only possible with stable core funding. We enter 2005-06 with enthusiasm and energy for our work.
