OVERVIEW OF THE COMMISSION

The Law Reform Commission of Nova Scotia was created by the Government of Nova Scotia under the Law Reform Commission Act, which came into force in 1991. The Commission reviews Nova Scotia's laws and makes recommendations for their improvement, modernization and reform.

The Commission consists of between five and seven Commissioners (there are currently seven), an Executive Director and legal research and administrative staff. The Commission reports to the public and the elected representatives of Nova Scotia through the Attorney General of Nova Scotia.

The Commission is funded jointly by the Government of Nova Scotia and the Law Foundation of Nova Scotia. The Law Foundation, which funds work relating to law, legal education, and the administration of justice, obtains its funds from the interest on lawyers' general trust accounts.

The Commissioners serve part-time and come from different sectors of the community, including: (a) a judge of a court of the Province; (b) two members of the Nova Scotia Barristers' Society; (c) a member of the faculty of the Schulich School of Law, Dalhousie University; and (d) up to two community representatives appointed by the provincial Cabinet. At least one of the Commissioners must not be a graduate in law.

The Commission has produced 47 project papers and reports, and 20 annual reports. All publications can be downloaded without cost from the Commission's website.

Since it began operations in 1991, many of the Commission's recommendations have been adopted directly in new legislation or improvements to existing statutes. One of the Commission's first reports led to the creation of Nova Scotia's family maintenance enforcement program, under the Maintenance Enforcement Act. The Commission's reports on probate law and the law of wills resulted in a new Probate Act in 2000 and significant reforms to Nova Scotia's Wills Act in 2006. Its report on builders' liens resulted in the enactment of a new Builders' Lien Act in 2004. The Commission's recommendations in relation to mental health law formed the basis for many of the provisions of the Involuntary Psychiatric Treatment Act of 2005. A report on substitute decision-making for personal care decisions provided the background for the Personal Directives Act of 2008. The Commission's 2006 report on vexatious litigants resulted in amendments to the Judicature Act in 2009, to deal with those who unduly strain the time and resources of Nova Scotia courts.

More recently, the government of Nova Scotia has enacted regulations under the Environment Act in respect of contaminated sites, relying on the Commission's 2009 report on that topic. The regulations are scheduled to come into effect in July 2013. In 2011, the provincial legislature passed legislation to abolish an antiquated and troublesome rule of law called the rule against perpetuities, following the Commission's 2010 report recommending the abolition of that rule. In May of 2012 the legislature passed legislation to amend the Maintenance and Custody Act, expressly confirming the rights of grandparents to apply for access rights to grandchildren, following the Commission's 2007 recommendation to that effect.

THE YEAR IN REVIEW 2011-2012

Work Program and Publications

Seniors-only Housing

This project was undertaken as a result of a reference to the Commission from the Attorney General of Nova Scotia in March 2010. The principal issue was whether or not there should be an amendment to the Nova Scotia Human Rights Act in order to facilitate the development of housing which is reserved exclusively for seniors. Certain Canadian jurisdictions have provisions in their human rights legislation which exempt seniors-only housing from a complaint of age discrimination.

The Commission published a Discussion Paper in December of 2010, and a Final Report in April 2011. The Commission concluded that an exemption for seniors-only housing should not be introduced into the Nova Scotia Human Rights Act. The Commission was concerned that a blanket exemption would apply to any seniors-only restriction. That would include assisted living facilities but also a gated community, or a condo, or apartment building, reserved for seniors. The exemption would deny housing opportunities to younger adults and families with children. In the Commission's view, while that might be justifiable in certain cases, it would not be so in every case. The Act currently has a number of existing defences and exemptions that permit seniors-only housing when the restriction can be justified. The Commission concluded those provisions were better than a blanket exemption.

As the Commission noted upon the publication of the Final Report:

The Act presently contains exemptions for 'bona fide requirements' - that is, where a form of alleged discrimination is necessary for important purposes, and there is no other reasonable option - and also programs to remedy disadvantage of certain groups, including seniors. Either of those could be used to justify a seniors-only rule, depending on the circumstances. As well, under the Act, the Human Rights Commission has discretion to approve an age-based restriction in advance, thereby shielding it from a complaint. ... [T]he Act's current provisions are better than a blanket exemption, because they require an assessment of the justification for each age limit, rather than permitting any age restriction, whether justified or not.

Enforcement of Civil Judgments

This project had its origins in the Commission's work in 2009 evaluating the Small Claims Court. In survey research, users of the Small Claims Court expressed general satisfaction with the workings of that court, but were frustrated with the process for enforcing, or collecting on, judgments. The Department of Justice asked the Commission to examine the issue of enforcement in the civil justice system at large. This is an important project involving both access to, and the effectiveness of, the justice system.

This project includes a discrete enforcement question relating to the garnishment of wages of judgment debtors. This issue first arose during the passage of the new Civil Procedure Rules through the House of Assembly, and was referred to the Commission for study in 2009. The Commission decided that this question could be best dealt with in the context of the civil judgment enforcement project.

The project examines the various statutes, regulations and rules that govern a disparate array of enforcement processes, with the aim of streamlining and simplifying the system. The project also considers modernization and enhancement of the powers of enforcement officers, in order to better effect recovery of elusive or intangible assets. Finally, the project aims to modernize Nova Scotia's provisions for exempt assets and income, to ensure that judgment debtors and their families are not deprived of the means to function as healthy, productive and continuing members of society.

A project Advisory Group met in December 2009 and in April 2010. A discussion paper was published in December of 2011. The discussion paper proposed substantial adoption of the Uniform Law Conference of Canada's Uniform Enforcement of Civil Money Judgments Act, modified to suit the Nova Scotia context. The Commission received a number of responses from interested stakeholders, including lawyers, poverty law advocates, the banking industry, and credit counseling agencies. The Commission has undertaken significant further research and deliberation on various matters raised in the comments. A second discussion paper is planned for later in 2012 on the matter of asset and income exemptions, with a final report expected to follow in 2013.

Builders' Lien Act

In March of 2010, the Minister of Justice requested the Commission's recommendations with regard to several discrete questions relating to holdbacks under the Builders' Lien Act of 2004. That Act reflects the recommendations in the Commission's 2003 Report, Builders' Liens in Nova Scotia: Reform of the Mechanics' Lien Act. As well, the project examines whether and to what extent the Small Claims Court ought to have jurisdiction over builders' lien matters.

The Commission published a Discussion Paper in March of 2012. A number of responses were received and the Commission will publish a Final Report later this year.

Powers of Attorney Act

The Minister of Justice requested the Commission to provide its general recommendations regarding the improvement and modernization of the Nova Scotia Powers of Attorney Act. The Act is inadequate and out of date, and its deficiencies have propelled recent litigation and piecemeal reform legislation. The legislation in other Canadian jurisdictions is far more modern and expansive, particularly with regard to the duties of the attorney and the protection of the donor. The project affords an opportunity to strengthen Nova Scotia's laws for the protection of seniors, and others who rely on substitute decision-makers.

The Commission prepared an extensive Issues Paper, including a comprehensive comparative review of powers of attorney and substitute decision-making legislation in Canada and beyond. The Commission convened an advisory group, consisting of practitioners with expertise in estate planning and elder law, the CEO of the Nova Scotia Department of Seniors, an RCMP Senior Safety Coordinator and the Nova Scotia Public Trustee. The group has held a number of meetings to discuss the issues raised in the Issues Paper, with the aim of developing preliminary proposals for the Commission's consideration. The Commission expects to publish a discussion paper during the 2012-13 fiscal year.

Matrimonial Property Act

During the reporting period, Commission staff began research for a project to review the Nova Scotia Matrimonial Property Act. It has been 30 years since the Act came into force, and it has not been substantially amended since that time. Family law stakeholders, and in particular the practicing bar and academic commentators, have indicated that the Act is in need of review on several fronts. The Act affects a large number of Nova Scotians - family law litigation representing a substantial proportion of contested matters in Nova Scotia courts. A number of other jurisdictions have substantially reformed their matrimonial property legislation in recent years.

The Commission approved the project at its meeting in April 2012, and Commission staff has begun research and preparation in earnest. The Commission expects to convene an advisory group in the Fall.

Internal Administration and Organization

The Commission currently has seven Commissioners. In June of 2011, Mr. D. Peter Mancini was appointed to the Commission. Mr. Mancini, a former Member of Parliament for Sydney-Victoria, practiced with Nova Scotia Legal Aid for 25 years, and is currently Director of Service Delivery for the Nova Scotia Legal Aid Commission.

As of April 1, 2011, Angus Gibbon was appointed to the position of Executive Director, replacing John E.S. Briggs upon his retirement. The position of Legal Research Counsel was filled in mid-June 2011 with the appointment of Ms. Ilana Luther. Ms. Luther is a graduate of Osgoode Hall Law School, and has an LLM from Harvard Law School. She practiced poverty law and family law in Ontario and Nova Scotia before joining the Commission. She is currently completing a JSD at the Schulich School of Law at Dalhousie University.

The Commission continues to benefit from the services of Professor William H. Charles, Q.C. as Special Counsel to the Commission. Professor Charles has provided valuable assistance with respect to all Commission projects during the past year.

Funding & Finances

The Commission's financial statement for the year ending 31 March 2012 is attached to this report as an Appendix.

During the reporting period, the Commission received operational funding in the amount of $142,325.00 from the Law Foundation, and $184,824.00 from the Department of Justice.

The Commission incurred an operating surplus of $35,942.41 in 2011-12, mainly due to a vacancy in the position of Legal Research Counsel from April 1 to mid-June, 2011, and cost-cutting to bring expenses in line with expected future revenue. As anticipated, Law Foundation funding for 2012-13 was reduced by 25%, due to persistently low interest rates. The Commission is expecting to incur an operating deficit of approximately $20,000 in the 2012-13 fiscal year, despite significant further cost cutting.
